Digital India sets pace for a makeover that shall change the face of the entire nation, impacting cities, towns, villages and more. This change is possible only when e-governance project is implemented in a structured and professional manner.

Department of Electronics and Information Technology (DeitY), Government of India has taken a bold initiative to prepare North East for Digital India.

Given the need for trained e-Governance Professionals, the project intends to fill the skill gaps and build overall capabilities in North East States.

The e-Governance Capacity Building Programmes for North East aim at:

- Enhancing skills of Government officers in the state to lead, support, manage and execute Mission Mode Projects under NeGP and other e-Governance Projects in their respective State Governments.

- Developing local trainers for North East region by steering Train the Trainer Programmes, which will benefit to cover larger groups subsequently.

- Introducing a diploma course in e-Governance for 25 enthusiastic officers from the region, who would in turn serve the government and play a vital role in implementation of e-Governance in future.
In the North East Capacity building initiatives, there are different training programmes which are targeted for skill building of Government officers, and to nurture a pool of trainers in e-Governance. The North East trainings include:
